'T WAS THE NIGHT BEFORE CHRISTMAS

TWENTY-SEVEN years ago tonight you lay in bed listening for Santa Claus. The grownups are talking downstairs but it sounds like mumumdiminum through the living room ceiling. Someone's laughing; it's mother, she has on a blue dress and the flowers smelled nice when she bent over and kissed you a while ago. Now they're quiet and you hear the leaky faucet in the bathroom. The door slammed, that couldn't be Santa Claus already, no it's Uncle Jack, he's blowing his nose. Will they all wait up to see Santa? Maybe he won't like it. Last year the Cooper kids peeked and saw Santa Claus and he heard them and opened the door and acted mad. He had a wart on his nose like Bobby Cooper's Uncle Jerry. Maybe that's his sleigh now, no, that's Mr. and Mrs. Payne coming home from being out . . . It's nice to be sleepy and warm in bed. Pretty soon Santa Claus will come and tomorrow you'll have a cool, green Christmas tree and a sled and single-runner skates.

Santa's Pack Are Heaps Of Toys

When the child found the sack of toys, he was very surprised. The sack was full of toys, and he was very happy. He was very happy to find the sack of toys, and he was very happy to find the sack of toys.

The time is rapidly drawing near when Santa will, driving north by polar, printing circles and headed to depart with gifts from the "Great Claus factory," will leave on his journey across the world. It is the event that all of the reindeer are forced to drop out because of the tremendous driving pace. Santa will be forced to take the reindeer to the pole to be added to the points along the way.

When Santa was asked his chief desire for the year, he replied: "Around the world," his merry crew's travelling and slight with joy and satisfaction.

The agent's rest stretches across the rugged mountains of Greenland, down the barren deserts and the impossible forests of Canada, through the United States — and from there to the world.

THE LEGEND OF THE CHRISTMAS ROSE

Then the three kings said, "All belongs to the new-born babe and we will give none of it to you," and then continued on their way.

THE poor shepherd had begun to cry for his longing to do homage to the Christ child grew greater and greater. Tear upon tear fell upon the ground.

SO HEZEL, a luminous light from the shining star above the mountain, appeared to him. The whole world in glory. As the shepherd looked about, he beheld lands springing from the earth, moistened by his tears and opening into white shining blossoms. Joyously, he gathered the flowers, saying, "Now I have a gift for the Christ child."

HE hurried to Bethlehem and softly entered the stable. On knelt before him, he laid the flowers at the feet of the Christ child. The babe laughingly reached for the starry blossoms.

THE three kings looked on shamefacedly but spread the news far and wide as another one of God's miracles, that on this wonderful night he made to blossom the modest white Christmas Rose!

It is a good thing to keep Christmas. The very making of it is a good thing. The very making of it is a good thing. The very making of it is a good thing.

A Santa Claus?

Of Course There Is!

How the Late Jacob A. Rins, of New York, Explained It To a Little Friend.

For Santa Claus is a little boy, there is a Santa Claus, said God. "The world would indeed be a better place if there were no Santa Claus. The world would indeed be a better place if there were no Santa Claus."
